

5 Interior Problems Preventing You from Selling More Cars

(and How to Fix Them)

We've been doing auto interior repairs for more than 20 years, and in that time, we've worked on hundreds of thousands of cars. We've seen interiors in all sorts of conditions, and over the years, we've found there are 5 common interior problems that keep dealers from selling cars. The good news? All of the problems are fixable.

01

Stains

Stains are gross. No matter how big or small they are, or what caused the stain (did you know water can cause stains?!), they don't look good. Professional stain removal will make it look like the stains were never even there.

Steering Wheel Repair

The steering wheel is a pretty major part of the interior. After all, it's what helps us get where we need to go. A steering wheel that's discolored, peeled, chipped, or otherwise damaged isn't something someone will want to hold onto as they drive.

03

Plastic Repair

When there's damage to interior plastic, it can really make it seem like the car is falling apart, even if it's not. Plastic repair will fix it right up, making the area look brand-new again.

04

Burns and Holes in Cloth

Most burns and holes aren't intentional, but they happen, most often to the seats and headliner. It's not just unappealing — it's ugly, and it can make buyers wary of buying an otherwise good car. The right tools can repair these defects, helping them to disappear.

05

Leather Repair

Leather looks good and feels good... until it's cracked or worn. Then, it's an uncomfortable eyesore. Leather repair can restore the life of the material, bringing luxurious leather back to life.

Get the Best Results So You Can Sell More Cars and Make More Money

Many dealers struggle to find a reliable, high-quality service to repair their auto interiors, most of which have one or more of the problems listed above. At The Plastic Surgeon Interiors, we're committed to using quality products that deliver the best results: quality, long-lasting interior repairs that leave your cars looking like new so you can sell your used cars more quickly, for more money.
